

ACCOUNTING TECHNICIAN

DEFINITION

To perform paraprofessional accounting work in the maintenance of a departmental accounting system requiring the use and implementation of technical accounting principles and procedures.

DISTINGUISHING CHARACTERISTICS

The classification of Accounting Technician is distinguished from classes in the Account Clerk series by the former having full responsibility for a specialized accounting support operation which requires a thorough understanding of an established accounting system, substantial subject matter knowledge, and the ability to apply basic accounting principles to a variety of transactions. Incumbents may have functional and/or technical supervision over a small fiscal support unit that performs routine or moderately difficult accounting work. The emphasis of this classification is not on supervision but on the performance of difficult and responsible paraprofessional accounting work in support of an accounting system.
